

अन्न (pronounced "ann") is a Sanskrit word that means "food" or "grain" and can refer to any kind of edible sustenance, whether in the form of cooked meals or raw ingredients. This word is commonly used in various Indian languages to refer to food.

अन्न offers food for the mind and the soul. Indian food is a vast constellation of culinary influences and traditions. This is reflected in the philosophy guiding our menu, which consists of a variety of traditional and regional foods of India.

In consonance with this philosophy, the restaurant also offers a feast for the eyes, with displays of vibrant and timeless traditions of Indian art which form our living heritage.

The works placed in the restaurant 'ann' have been chosen with thought and care to directly showcase the richness of the intangible heritage of India. The paintings have been drawn from the Gond and Bhil communities, and primarily refer to the production of food. From the tree of life which provides food, shelter, even clothing, the entire cycle of life is represented through the artistic expression of the Bhil and Gond communities in their inimitable style.

From the bird's resting on an antelope's horns, while eating insects off his ear, to the woodcutter collecting firewood, to other activities such as harvesting, ploughing and cooking, the quotidian tasks of tribal life are beautifully evoked.

GOND

The Gonds are among the largest indigenous communities in India, concentrated in Madhya Pradesh and surrounding regions. Traditional Gond art was created on the walls and facades of their domestic and community spaces. It was in the early 1980s that a cluster of Gond artists started adapting their ritualistic painting to modern media such as paper and canvas. Modern Gond art demonstrates strong roots in their historic lifestyle, the natural world, mythological beliefs and their songs and oral histories. These complex and intriguing aspects merge aesthetically with modern modes of depiction and techniques, resulting in colourful odes to their myriad past.

BHIL

The Bhils are among the largest indigenous tribal communities found in Chhattisgarh, Gujarat, Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, Andhra Pradesh and Rajasthan. Essentially a farming community, their art draws on nature-based themes and the animal kingdom. Changing seasons, natural phenomena and Gods that protect them are common subjects. The natural colours used are vibrant and locally prepared. Their ritualistic art is practised in daily life as well as on special occasions, most popularly in decorating the walls of their domestic spaces. Pithora paintings are among their traditional artforms that have garnered attention in recent years.

We look forward to serving and sharing our अन्न with you.
